

Notes on Contributors

Michael P. Cañares is a graduate of law and accountancy from Holy Name University-Philippines and finished his MSc in development studies from the London School of Economics, UK. Mr. Cañares is currently the coordinator of Holy Name University's publication office. He has taught at the university for 10 years for which he was awarded as the Most Outstanding Finance Educator in 2010 by FINEX, the Central Bank of the Philippines, and CITIBank. He is recently published in the International Journal for Small Business and Entrepreneurship.

Dr. Raimundo Batista dos Santos Junior is a professor of political science in the Postgraduate Program of the Universidade Federal do Piauí (UFPI) in Brazil. He is also a researcher of the Núcleo de Pesquisa sobre Desenvolvimento e Pobreza (NUDEP). His research interests are on the theory of international relations, globalization, international cooperation, development, and poverty. He finished his masters and doctoral degrees in political science in the State University of Campinas, Brazil.

Fides A. del Castillo is an Assistant Professor of De La Salle University Manila in the Philippines. She is the Vice-President of Values and Religion Educators Association of the Philippines and a co-founder of the International Forum on Religious Education and Theological Studies.

Dr. Dan Van der Horst obtained his Doctorandus in Physical and Environmental Geography at the University of Utrecht, the Netherlands and his PhD in Geography at the University of Aberdeen, United Kingdom. He is currently a lecturer in environmental policy and management at the School of Geography, Earth and Environmental Sciences (GEES), University of Birmingham, UK. His main area of research is in natural resource management, focusing especially on the governance of multifunctional land use, ecosystem services, and renewable energy systems. Much of his research draws on heterodox economic traditions (especially spatial economics, ecological economics) and transdisciplinary (natural science-social science) approaches.

Dr. Khayrazad Kari Jabbour is an electrical and computer engineer with a doctorate degree in Education Leadership and Administration, Computer Technology in Education from the St. Louis University in the United States. She is currently an assistant professor at the Faculty of Education in Lebanese University, Lebanon. Dr. Jabbour sits as a member of the editorial or advisory boards of the American College of Technology, the Barnolipi Journal, and the Indian Journal of Education and Information Management. Her research focuses on computer ethics, IT education, and multimedia teaching and learning.

Dr. Etim E. Okon obtained four degrees (BA; LL.B; MA; PhD) from the University of Calabar, Nigeria. He is a Senior Lecturer at the Department of Religious and Cultural Studies, University of Calabar. He has published over thirty articles in academic journals within and outside Nigeria.

Dr. Jianping Wang finished her masters degree in Human Geography from Lanzhou University, China and her doctorate degree in Natural Resource Management from the University of Birmingham, United Kingdom. She is currently an associate professor at the Department of Regional and Resource Planning in Yunnan University, China. Her research focuses on sustainable management of natural resources, more specifically the use of interdisciplinary approaches to evaluate impact of policy interventions and development projects. She is particularly interested in understanding the roles of institutions in natural resource management and in exploring the balance between social equity and economic efficiency.